

Abstract

In a sensor, in which light beams are emitted in various directions, reflected at objects that may be present, received again and evaluated according to direction and transit time in the sense of a three-dimensional imaging of the objects, light 5 sources are arranged in the form of a two-dimensional matrix for generating the light beams.